Area Overview

Some cities take great pride in their homegrown produce, others in their local sports teams. What makes Cincinnati proud? Their flying pigs. While the city doesn't appear to actually breed pigs that can levitate, the idea of a flying pig is very symbolic to Cincinnati. It represents the Ohioan city's pork-packing tradition and is the face of several Cincinnati events and exhibits. Each year, Cincinnati holds the Flying Pig Marathon, the 3rd largest first time marathon in the world. And at Sawyer Point, the beautiful shopping and entertainment area by the Ohio River, you'll find an ever-growing collection of flying pig artwork commissioned by the city of Cincinnati.
